PREFACE.

THE order of Cistercian monks, founded by Robert, Abbot of Molesme, in the diocese of Langres, France, in 1098, was so designated after one of its earliest monasteries, Cistercium (Citeaux) in Burgundy. The monks wore white vestments, with black cowl and scapular. In Scotland they owned thirteen monasteries, and there were also eleven convents connected with the order. The Cistercian convent or priory of Coldstream stood at the point where the stream of Leet joins the Tweed in the ancient parish of Lennel, Berwickshire.¹ It was founded and dedicated to the Virgin by Gospatric, Earl of Dunbar, third of the name, who also reared the Cistercian nunnery at Eccles in the same county. His seal, from an impression appended to a charter granted by him to the friars of St Cuthbert's Church,

Durham, is presented in the accompanying engraving.¹

In the foundation charter (8), Earl Gospatric grants to the sisters of Witehou,² along with certain portions of land, half the church of Laynall or Lennel. Of the church of Lennel, a structure certainly not later than the close of the thirteenth century, the remains, consisting of one broken arch in decorative architecture, are still visible. In this same charter the earl gives to the convent a portion of land at Birgham on the Tweed. At this place, about three and a half miles to the west of Coldstream, where a bridge united the two kingdoms, several important transactions have occurred. Here in 1180 King William the Lion, meeting in conference the Bishop of Durham and other English courtiers, refused their demand on the part of Henry II. as to levying a tax for a new crusade. At Birgham, on the 17th March 1289-90, was held a meeting of the guardians, nobility, and commons of the kingdom, to approve the papal dispensation for the marriage of Prince Edward of England with the young Queen Margaret. At Birgham, in 1291, the several competitors for the Scottish throne met the commissioners of Edward I. In his foundation charter, Earl Gospatric associated himself with Derder, his countess, who personally bestowed on the nuns a carucate—that is, from sixty to a hundred acres—of the Hirscl, together with the church of that place. Situated about a mile to the north-west of Coldstream, the Hirscl now constitutes the beautiful demesne of the Earl of Home. The church or chapel of the Hirscl had disappeared prior to 1627, though the churchyard then remained in use.¹

² Chalmers, in his "Caledonia" (ii. 342), remarks: "The nuns were brought from a Cistercian convent at Withow, in England." For this assertion he produces no authority, and there is no trace of any religious house of the name. The name was probably the original description of the spot on which the convent stood.

In the foundation charter, Earl Gospatric names as donors his cousin Addoc, and Norman, son of Edulf. Among the witnesses is Walter (Waldeve?), the earl's son; also Gilbert Fresell (Fraser), grandfather of Bernard Fraser, Sheriff of Stirling in the reign of King Alexander II. In a charter of confirmation (11) by Earl Gospatric, the land of Hirscl is named in the older form of Herishille.

These charters received episcopal confirmation from Richard, Bishop of St Andrews (Appendix I.), a circumstance which would determine the date of erection, since Richard was consecrated in 1165, and the founder, Earl Gospatric, died in the following year.

Earl Gospatric, founder of the convent, left two sons, Waldeve and Patrick. The latter inherited the manor of Greenlaw, leaving a son, William, who, espousing his cousin Ada, obtained with her as dower the lands of Home. Waldeve, the elder son, succeeded his father as fourth earl. By charter he confirmed his father's grants, and further bestowed on the convent the lands of Whitchester (26). One of the witnesses to this charter is Roger de Merley, doubtless the great baron of Morpeth whose ancestor, Ranulf, married Juliana, daughter of the second Earl Gospatric, and with his wife, according to Dugdale, founded the abbey of Newminster, near Morpeth, circa 1138.

Earl Waldeve died in 1182, leaving by his wife Aelina, with other children, a son, Patrick, who succeeded to the earldom. He confirmed to the nuns (7) the church of Laynall with its pertinents; also (17) the church of Hirscl, granted by Earls Gospatric and Waldeve, Patrick his uncle, and William his uncle's son. In his time various grants in connection with the lands of Scaithemor, situated to the north of Coldstream, were made to the sisters by the family of Norman of Leinhal. First, Richard, son of Norman of Leinhal, gave to the convent the lands of Scaithemor (5), which his father granted to Amabel, Richard's mother; then Amabel (6), wife of Norman, surrendered her dower to the convent, and thereafter (3, 4) Earl Patrick granted charters of confirmation. Among the witnesses to the charter of Amabel is Robert de Wallibus, or Vaux, ancestor of the Lords of Dirleton.

A zealous supporter of the Church, Earl Patrick bestowed gifts on the abbeys of Kelso, Melrose, and Dryburgh, while his wife Ada, illegitimate daughter of William the Lion, founded several convents. He died in 1232, leaving two sons, Patrick and William, also a daughter Ada.¹

Patrick, second of the name, succeeded Patrick, his father, and is designated both of Dunbar and March. During his father's lifetime he granted to the convent the lands of Selbuclethe, also the pasture lands at Ferniley and Strikesley (29, 30).

Contemporaneous with the grants of the second Earl Patrick were those of his sister Ada. Obtaining from her father the lands of Home, she espoused, first, William de Courtenay, who died without issue. Thereafter she married her relative, William, son of Patrick of Greenlaw, who, after his lands, assumed the name of Home. To the nuns William was a liberal benefactor. He confirmed to them the church of Hirscl (15); and in separate charters granted them the lands of Rondes (18), the meadow of Bradspotes, and the lands of Thotheryg, Spechenes, and Kaldstreflat. He also granted them the pastures of Thornidicke, and confirmed them in the pastures at Gordon (35). The pastures at Gordon, and other lands, were granted to the convent by Thomas de Gordon and his son of the same name (36, 40).

The second Patrick, Earl of Dunbar or March, died in 1248. Having married Christian or Euphemia, daughter of Walter, the High Steward, he had a son, Patrick, who succeeded him. In a series of charters (2, 9, 16, 19), the third Earl Patrick granted to the convent a croft in the village of Laynall, the south town of Laynall, a carucate of land at Haldhersehille (Old Hirscl), and other lands at Hirscl. He also, for the safety of his own soul and that of his (second) wife Cecilia, bestowed on the nuns all the land at Laynall which Sir Patrick Edgar had resigned to him as overlord. Sir Patrick's charter of resignation (12), dated at Coldstream on Friday after the Feast of St Denys (13th October) 1273, refers to "privileges granted or to be granted to crusaders." Sir Patrick Edgar, a descendant of Edgar, third son of Gospatric, second Earl of Dunbar, is, in 1258, named as a witness to a charter of confirmation by Sir Robert of Polwarth to the church of Kelso.¹

On the death of Sir Patrick Edgar, Mariota, his widow, described as Lady of Hume, in return for money paid her "in her urgent necessity," surrendered her right to the north town of Laynall in favour of the convent. She was second wife of William de Hume or Home, whose son, Geoffrey de Home, swore allegiance to Edward I. in 1296.¹

On the 3d May 1263, during the lifetime of the third Earl Patrick, and probably at his instance, King Alexander III. issued at Roxburgh a royal precept, taking the nuns of Coldstream under his special protection, and providing that none should take pledges of them for debt to another, but only for their own (Appendix III.).

During the Border struggles in the war of independence, the nuns of Coldstream suffered heavily. King Edward I. was at Coldstream in August 1290.² On Wednesday, 28th March 1296, in his northern progress, he encamped at Coldstream with 5000 horse and 30,000 infantry. On this occasion the priory and its orchard suffered extensive damage, for which compensation was demanded by Walter, master of the house, and six of his brethren. They claimed £50 for wheat, rye, barley, malt, and oats; £62, 15s. for cattle, sheep, lambs, and pigs; also compensation for injury to the orchard, which is estimated at the annual value of 100 shillings; and for injury to the buildings and utensils, 100 shillings. The demand, presented to Hugh de Cressingham, Treasurer of Scotland, was complied with, partly in kind, 700 sheep having been brought from the forest of Athole, and by the sheriff thereof delivered to the convent. A balance of £67, 3s. 4d. remained unsatisfied (Supplement to Pref., I.).

In the following year the prioress and nuns of Coldstream represented to the English council their poverty, in respect of an obligation for £11, 4s. in payment of corn and other victuals supplied to them by the king's servants at Berwick, on account of which a writ in Exchequer had been issued against them by Hugh de Cressingham, the Treasurer. Consequent on this representation, the king issued a mandate, on the 12th March 1296-7, restraining the Treasurer from proceeding to enforce the exaction. In a subsequent mandate, dated at Westminster, 21st June 1297, Edward commanded the Earl of Surrey, guardian, and Hugh de Cressingham, Treasurer, to fully remit to the prioress and nuns the foresaid debt.

On the 9th June 1297, in a writ by King Edward for levying arrears of charges made upon the goods and lay chattels of religious houses in the counties of Berwick and Roxburgh, in the bailliary of the Sheriff of Northumberland, the prioress of Coldstream was charged 14s.¹ (Supplement to Pref., II.).

Evidently about the same period an undated memorial was, by the prioress and nuns, presented to Edward I. and his Privy Council, entreating that the Sheriff of Northumberland might be authorised to grant them seizin of their rents within his bailliary, of which they had been deprived by the war. The Council allowed the prioress to obtain a brief from Chancery to the Sheriff of Northumberland, instructing him to certify what tenements were owned by the convent within his bailliary before the beginning of the war, and by whom these were at that time held (Supplement to Pref., II.).

Patrick, Earl of Dunbar and March, third of the name, married, about 1243, Christian, sister of Robert de Bruce, afterwards one of the competitors for the Scottish throne. He died in 1289, and was succeeded by his eldest son, Patrick, who confirmed to the nuns of Coldstream the grants made by his father of land at Laynall and houses at Berwick (14); also the land of Whitchester and its pertinents, and the lands held by the nuns at Bassendean and Thornidich (57). He died in 1309, leaving by his wife, Marjory Cumyn, a son, Patrick, who became Earl of Dunbar, fifth of the name. A charter of the land of Putanyshalwe (20), granted by him to the nuns during his father's lifetime, is the last donation of the house to the nuns of Coldstream.

Among the other benefactors of the convent named in the chartulary were members of the family of Haultun, probably Hutton. Ranulf de Haultun granted to the convent seven acres of land, described in the charter (10) as being his possession "before the conversion of his daughter Matilda," a phrase implying that she had entered the convent. To the nuns William of Haltun confirmed (58) five acres of land, which had previously been bestowed by his brother Radulph.

From members of the family of Derchester, the nuns obtained liberal benefactions. Walter, son of Sir Thomas of Derchester, granted them twelve acres of land in Huysheuigh, and twelve acres in Old Hirsell. This grant was confirmed by Walter, son of Walter of Derchester (22); also by Thomas, son of Walter, who confirmed to the nuns the grants made by his father and predecessors. Thereafter Alan, son of Thomas, granted and confirmed to Sir Walter the chaplain, son of Walter, son of Swardy, an acre of land called Cakewellegat, in the town of Derchester, which was to be held of the granter and his heirs for the reddendo of one penny or a pair of gloves (33). By Walter the chaplain, the land of Cakewellegat, with an acre and a half at Coceflatte, was conveyed to the convent.

Richard, son of Hugh the cook of Derchester, bestowed on the nuns a toft, with a rood of land adjacent, for the annual rent of one pound of cumin, or three halfpennies, to be paid at the fair of Roxburgh (31).

To a charter of confirmation by Earl Gospatric

(11), one of the witnesses is Ernulf de Suinton.¹ By charter (25), Alexander of Syntun (Swinton) granted to the nuns the land of Totheryg (Todrig), which he had received in gift from Sir Aymer de Makyswell (Maxwell). John Swinton of that ilk let for ten years to the prioress and nuns, the land of Little Swinton (59), with entry at Whitsunday 1424. John Swinton was killed at Verneuil on the 27th August thereafter, whereupon William Drax, Prior of Coldingham, as lord superior of the lands, continued the lease during the minority of the heir; his renewal is dated 22d July 1426 (60). An indenture bearing date 10th October 1419, between John, prior of the cathedral church of Durham, and his chapter, on the one part, and Marion, prioress, and the convent of Coldstream on the Tweed, narrates that lately John Swynton, esquire, of Scotland, had given to the prioress in pure alms all the lands in Little Swynton, which he held of the said prior and convent of Durham, and the prior of the cell of Coldingham, in capite, by military service, and also paying 13s. 4d. annually to the said prior, etc., and 8s. for the king's "corrody." The prior and convent of Durham ratified and confirmed the said donation.²

To the convent Thomas of Rauchburn granted the meadow called Camminesmedu, in the territory of Thornidich (41), which was confirmed by Thomas of Rauchburn, son and heir of William of Rauchburn.

From the family of Male, afterwards Melville, the nuns obtained considerable benefactions. Robert of Maille granted to them seven acres in the field of Bastynden (Bassendean—44). Thereafter William of Mahile granted (45) them a toft and croft in the village of Bastynden, with two acres of land, in pure alms, for the souls of Earl Waldeve and his countess. Further benefactions were bestowed by Robert of Mayl (46), described as “nepos” of Garin of Mayle, and Roger, son of William of Bastynden (47).

Donors to the convent on a smaller scale were W——, the boatman, burgess of Berwick (48); Roger Nurys, burgess of Berwick (49); Robert de Bernham, rector of the church of Tynninghame (50); William de Salle (51); John de Dunbar, burgess of Berwick (52); Thomas of Warndham (53); Ysouda, daughter of Wido, glassmaker, of Alnwick (54); and John of Plesset, in Northumberland (55).

On the 25th July 1333, Edward III. granted letters of protection to a number of persons, among whom were the master of the Priory of Coldstream, and the prioress and sisters of that house.¹ There is no further notice of the convent till 1472, when on the 6th June of that year James III. confirmed a charter under the great seal, granted at Perth on the 23d July 1459, whereby his royal predecessor, James II., bestowed on the convent the lands of Simpryn (Simprim—Appendix V.).

At Edinburgh, on the 24th February 1490, James IV. granted a royal inspeximus of a charter in favour of the prioress, Margaret Hoppringill,¹ of a ploughgate of land in the town of Lanele, in the sheriffdom of Berwick, granted on the 25th June 1489, by John Liddell of Lanele—the reddendo being a pair of hawking gloves, or twelve pennies (Appendix VI.).

On the 3d May 1509, the prioress and nuns obtained a royal letter under the privy seal, licensing them and their retainers to hold communication with Englishmen, and to traffic with them, in the season of war as well as in times of peace. By the same instrument the prioress and nuns were further authorised to receive on their premises as many as twelve persons from the sister kingdom, and to allow them to come and depart as convenience suited (Appendix VIII.).

The prioress obtained from James IV., on the 13th

July 1510, a lease of the lands of Hirsell and Graden, with their pertinents (Appendix IX., X.).

Though subsequently attached to English interests, Isabella Hoppringill, Prioress of Coldstream, was, prior to the battle of Flodden in 1513, a zealous upholder of Scottish rule. Immediately before the battle, Sir David Home, who accompanied the Scottish army, induced George, the eldest of his seven sons, known as "the spears of Wedderburn," to leave the field and return home. On his journey George visited his relative, the Prioress of Coldstream, who upbraided him for abandoning the national cause. Wounded by her invective, he rejoined the army and fell mortally wounded.¹ Subsequent to the battle, of which the scene was only five miles distant, the prioress aided through her retainers in the decent interment of a portion of the dead. Such at least is the tradition of the locality. During the troubled period which succeeded the battle, the prioress, Isabella, occupied an uneasy seat. From the proximity of the institution to the English border she became attached to the cause of England.

The Duke of Albany having in 1515, in his capacity as regent, seized the castle of Stirling, and thus secured the person of James V., the young king, Margaret, the queen-mother, entered into correspondence with Lord Dacre, the English minister, in the hope that her brother, Henry VIII., would levy war on the regent, so as to compel him to restore her son to her care and authority. During this correspondence and attendant negotiations, she established her abode at Blacader, a small town near Berwick, and when there found in Isabella of Coldstream an intelligent and congenial companion. She recommended the prioress and sisters to Lord Dacre's protection, and to her request on their behalf received from his lordship the following answer :

“MADAME,—In my mooste humble wise I recommend me unto your grace. And where it hath pleased you too desire me for your sake too cause all Englishmen too forbere to doo any hurtis unto the Prioires of Caldstreme and hir hous, madame, I shall with good will obserue your commaundemente and pleasure, she and hers doing ner supporting any too doo hurte to the king, my souerain lord's subiects, ner keeping ner receiving into hir hous any Scottishemen of war. Madame, ther is no seruauante ye haue that shalbe more desireous too doo your grace seruyce and pleasur than I shalbe, my poore honour saved ; and God knoweth, not onely the king, my master, but I and all other his subiects bee very sory of the war that is nowe betwene England and Scotland, and wold nevir have attempted the same but onely for the saufgard of the person of the kingis grace, your sonne, thinking his royall person too bee in extreme danger as long as he shalbe in the gouernaunce and keping of the Duke of Albany and Frenchemen, whiche undoubtedly bee more desireous too have hym king of that realme than the king, your sonne, thinking that if they had hym King of Scotland, they shuld foreuer have that land at their commaundement, by whome Scotland hath had small proufite unto this daye. Great pitie it is too see so many noble and wise men in Scotland too bee soo soore abewsed with the faire promyses of Fraunce as too put their naturall souerain lord in the gouernaunce of hym that is next the crowne and oute of the keping of his owne subiects. Madame, I beseche your grace too bee contente that I have thus playnly written unto your grace, whiche undoubtedly procedeth for the duty and love that I am bounde too bere unto all your blod, beseching Almyghty God too send your grace as moche joy of the king, your sonne, as your noble herte can desire, with thaccomplishment of your moste hertieste desires.

“The said Prioress of Caldstreame hath a protection of the kingis grace.”¹

The following edict by Henry VIII., for the protection of the prioress, Isabella, and her convent, was issued on 1st July 1515 :

“HENRY R.

In the spring of 1523, during the regent's absence in France, when Henry VIII. determined to make a war-like incursion on the Scottish eastern border, Queen Margaret again entreated that the prioress might not be molested. A letter which, on Dame Isabella's behalf, she despatched to the Earl of Surrey, as chief Warden of the English border, proceeds thus :

“ My lord, I comend me me (sic) hertlie to zou, and wyt ze I am informyt yat ze ar cummyn to ye bourdo^{rs} fornent Scotland, and yar is ane gud frend and seruand of myn quhilk I ame behaldyn to do for, quhilk wyynnys in ye bordo^r of Scotland and nerast to zour bounders of Ingland, and is prioress of ane puir abbay of sestis callyt Caldstreme, and it is aperand to be gret trubile one bay^t ye sidis, and sche is nerest ye skay^t, and yat place hes beine triblyt diuerss timis of befor, quharfor I pray you ry^t effectuisly yat for my saik yat sche and ye said place may be wntriblyt, and to haf na skay^t be Inglismen, for yai

“To my Lord of Surray.”

Not long afterwards the Marquis of Dorset, who acted under Surrey as Warden of the East Marches, sent to Henry VIII. the following despatch :

“Please it yo^r most noble grace to be advertysed that of late the quene’s grace of Scotland, yo^r suster, wrote her especiall lettres of requeste as well to my lord your lieutenante [Surrey] as to me, to forbere and save fro brennyng a poore religeous house of nunnes called Calestreme, the prioresse whereof her grace reaportith to be very goode and kynd unto her, whereupon both my seyde lord lieutenante and I have graunted hyr requeste, and have so writen unto her grace accordingly. Another cause which moved us the sooner to assure the sayde house was by cause the prioresse thereof is oon of the beste and assured spyes that we have in Scotland, for which cause we may not well spare her. She lately sent us worde how that the quene’s grace is deperted fro Starling, whether she doth not ascertain us, and hath takyn w^t hyr all the Frensshemen that were aboute the kingis grace, hyr sonne, which I preye Gode be trewe; and as we shall here and understonde more of her grace or other newes fro the said prioresse, so shall yo^r highenesse be advertysed from tyme to tyme accordingly.” [The writer here informs the king what “order had been taken” with the Tyndale and Redesdale men by Surrey and others, Rauffe Fenwycke having brought in half a score of the best as “suerties.” He thinks the arrangement a good one, “For they be the men which can do good service yf they luste, and may evyll be spared when we shall make any rode.” They and the Scottis have made no depredations lately],

"To the kingis moost noble grace."

The prioress well earned her protection, for she seems to have reported even her friend the queen's doings. Other letters prove her political activity. In one she reports to Sir William Bulmer, who held command on the eastern borders, that she had been eight days "at Dunbreton, Glasko, and Sterlyn," and supplies full accounts of Albany's military preparations, including the number and quality of his troops.²

When tidings reached her that the regent, with a force of nearly sixty thousand men, was advancing towards the eastern border to avenge the recent incursion, Isabella wavered in her attachment to English interests. But the repulse of Albany in his siege of Wark Castle, at the very outset of his operations, induced her to renew her adherence to the southern cause. Surrey, who had heard of her defection, had threatened the burning of her house—a menace which again evoked on her behalf the renewed intercession of her unfailing friend, Queen Margaret. With Lord Surrey the queen communicated in the following holograph letter :

"My lord, I commend me hartly to you, and I have resayved [Here the queen thanks Surrey for the good "intretment" he gave to her servant, and requests on behalf of the Abbot of Kelso that "na ewel" be done to that place.] "Allso, my lord, towschyng the Pryorez of Calstrem, I here say that ye are dysplesyd wyth her, and that ze vol born her place. My lord, I vold trwst that ze vol be betar lord to her for my sake, consideryng that I am behaldyng to her more than to any othar of her degre, and doth for me anythyng that sche can; wharefor I pray you hartly, my lord, for my sake, to do her no hurt, not lat non do her hurt.

YOUR MARGARET.¹

[Addressed] "To my Lord of Sowray."

Two days after the date of this letter, being the 24th November 1523, Dame Isabella of Coldstream sent hastily for Sir John Bulmer, who commanded the garrison at Norham Castle, when an interview took place, reported in the following letter despatched by Sir John to Lord Surrey:

"Plessyth y^t yowr lordshyp to knaw the Prioires off Calld-stryrm sent me word zysterday at iii off the klok to meghte hyr at Gradonforde and speke wyth hyr, and so I mayde all the haste I cowth, and I taryd ther ii hours of hyr, and when y^t was daygayng, she com to me, and I askyd hyr why she mayde me tary so long, and she sayde y^t she had sych a fray, y^t she durst not com forth of hyr dors; and I askyd hyr be

[Addressed]

“To myne espescyall good lorde, my Lorde off Surry, in haste. Haste poste, haste, hayst.”¹

From his mode of writing, and his expressed anxiety that the missive might soon reach Lord Surrey’s hand, it is obvious that Sir John Bulmer had, by Dame Isabella, been won over to her side. The story of a Parliament being assembled at Edinburgh to arrange a marriage between the young king and a daughter of the French monarch was simply a device of the prioress to excite the jealousy of the English court, and induce Henry’s northern lieutenants to resume their confidence in herself.

For the Princess Magdalen, only daughter of Francis I., whom James V. espoused in 1535, was then an infant of four years; nor does it appear that James ever cherished the notion of her becoming his queen, till captivated by her charms in France, a few weeks before their marriage. Dame Isabella's injunction to secrecy was therefore more than needed, for while, if known as a spy, she would have rendered herself obnoxious to the regent, she had certainly, in her own words, been "undone for ever," if detected in concocting a tale which might have superinduced further war and bloodshed.

Dame Isabella Hoppringill was henceforth an unflinching supporter of the English policy, and that of her patroness, the dowager-queen. In a letter by Dr Magnus, addressed to Cardinal Wolsey, on the 24th January 1525, she is described as "a spy in the pay of England." Queen Margaret continued warmly attached to her, as appears from a royal charter of James V. (Supplement IV.), the tenor of which is represented in the following abstract :

"James [V.], King of Scots, considering that the prioress and convent of his monastery of Coldstream show great hospitality and are ever ready to receive and entertain the ambassadors of England and other countries and also his own ambassadors and other honourable persons, therefore, in aid of their great costs, with consent of his dearest mother, the queen, liferentrix of the under-mentioned lands, and of the enroller of his accounts, grants in feu farm to Dame Isabella Hoppringill, prioress, and the convent, and her successors, the lands of Hirsill, and the third part of the lands of Gradane, with its fishing, near said monastery, upon the marches of the kingdom toward England, in the earldom of March, within the sheriffdom of Berwick, extending in the king's rental in all profits to £36, 13s. 4d. annually; the prioress and her successors paying annually to the queen-mother, for her life, the sum of £40 at Whitsunday and Martinmas, being an augmentation of five merks on the former rental; the prioress and her successors also building and maintaining a sufficient mansion on the lands, with a hall, chamber, kitchen, barn, cow-house, pigeon-house, etc. The great seal is appended at Edinburgh, 6th September A.D. 1528, the fifteenth of the king's reign." ¹

On the 20th July 1535, at Stirling, James V. granted an inspeximus of a charter of sale made by Alexander Ellem of Butterdene to the Prioress Isabella, of half a husband-land at Hirsell, with pertinents (Appendix VII.). On the 8th May 1537, she received a gift of the escheat of Alexander Heriot, in Dornchester. The instrument of gift proceeds thus :

"Ane lettre maid to Dame Isobell Hoppringill, Prioress of Cauldstreame, and hir assignais, ane or ma, of the gift of all gudis movable and unmovable, dettis, takkis, obligationis, soumes of money, and vtheris quhatsumever, quhilkis perteneit to Alexander Heriot in Dornchester, and now pertenyng, or onywys salhappin or may pertene to our souerane lord, be resoun of eschete throw being of the said Alexander fugitive fra the law, and at the horne for the slauchter of vmquhill [], with power, etc. At Edinburgh, the aucht day of Maii, the yere of God I^mv^exxxvii yeris. Composicio x li. per signaturam." ²

Dame Isabella Hoppringill died on the 26th January 1537-8, as appears by the minute of election of her successor, dated 23d February following. The original instrument, in Latin, is given in Supplement IV. ; it is here presented in abstract :

“To the Most Reverend Father and Lord in Christ, James [Betoun], by Divine compassion Archbishop of St Andrews, Primate of Scotland, and legatus natus. The nuns and convent of Coldstream, considering that by the canons a regular church should not be without a prioress beyond a month, and that Isabella, the late prioress of honoured memory, formerly prioress of the said monastery, had, on the 26th day of January previous, as it pleased God, gone the way of all flesh, and her body reverently been buried : the said nuns, in order that the monastery might not longer lament the inconvenience of a vacancy, forthwith, at the sound of the bell, more solito, had assembled in chapter the 13th day of the said instant month, canonically to celebrate the election of their future prioress, and to do all and sundry other matters known to relate to the business of such an election, as they had determined that to be the statutory, lawful, and peremptory date for conducting the election. Therefore, all and sundry the nuns of the said monastery, and all others having, or thinking they had, interest in the matter, having been cited by letter, after the mass of the Holy Spirit had been devoutly and solemnly celebrated in their said monastery, these nuns and convent, viz. : Dame Isabella Rutherford, sub-prioress ; Katherine Flemyng, Jonet Broun, Mariot Rutherford, Jonet Kingorne, Elizabeth Hoppringill, Katrine Stevinstoun, Cristina Todrik, Katrine Franche, Jonet Schaw, and Ellen Riddell, all together assembling at the sound of the bell as customary, in the chapter-house of the monastery, and deliberately treating of the business of the election, the hymn, ‘Veni Creator, Spiritus,’ for the sake of imploring the Holy Spirit, being sung by them on bent knees and with weeping voices, and all other accustomed rites duly observed and finished, they all and sundry, without any contrary voice, but altogether filled with the Divine inspiration and enlightened by the grace of the Holy Spirit, as they firmly believe, suddenly and unanimously, without concert or nomination preceding, but only having God before their eyes, directed their wishes, with one voice and one breath, upon Dame Jonet Hoppringill, a veiled and professed sister of their house, marked out by her virtues as the person most fit, worthy, and qualified, circumspect in spirituals and temporals, and for the rule and governance of their said monastery and its revenues, most able, expert, and industrious, arrived at lawful age, born of lawful matrimony and of honourable parents, above others expert in the rule and religion of the monastery, and elected the said Dame Jonet as their prioress and pastress of their souls. At length this their choice being made as set forth, they reverently, as is fitting, presented her to the archbishop, desiring him to give his consent thereto. At last the elect, after conferring maturely with certain of her fellow-sisters and friends, although in her humility and timidity asserting herself unworthy and unable to undergo such a load, she many times would have declined, yet devoutly bending the neck of her heart to the yoke of her Divine calling, and having invoked the aid of the Divine clemency, humbly assented to their wishes, sweetly undertaking the yoke of office thus placed as for the best on her shoulders, and piously accepting to the honour and glory of God Almighty and the most Blessed Virgin Mary, under whose names the said monastery was founded and raised; then they, with great rejoicing and loud voices, singing the glorious hymn of God, 'Te Deum Laudamus,' bells solemnly being rung, led her into the church of the monastery in procession, and rendering thanks to God, placed her before the high altar as usual; where a hymn being sung, and the usual oration made, immediately their election was declared to the clergy and people, and made public in due form. Wherefore they entreat the most reverend father, devoutly and humbly, to ratify the election thus canonically observed; that, God aiding them, the convent may under the healthy rule and careful governance of their new shepherdess, devoutly serve their Creator, and worthily carry on the Christian warfare; and they subscribe their names and affix their common seal, and record the whole proceedings by a notary-public on the date above written," etc.

Dame Janet Hoppringill's election was doubtless confirmed by the archbishop. She seems to have been the last ruler of the convent, as the structure was, in 1545, burned to the ground by the Earl of Hertford.¹ The eleven nuns mentioned in the preceding minute belonged to families whose names are still common in the district.

During the reign of Edward I. seven male persons are named in connection with the priory, these being Walter, master of the house, with six friars (Supplement I.). In the "Ragman Rolls," we find that "Wautier [Walter], persone del Eglise de Morton, e Mestre de Caldestreme," with other persons, swore fealty to Edward I.

No vestige of the convent remains. A large orchard occupies the site of the pomarium, which is mentioned as early as 1296, when it was damaged by the army of Edward I. In 1621, on the resignation to Sir John Hamilton of Trabroun, it is termed the "litle croft, callit the lyttle orchard." In 1640, it is indicated as the little croft called the pomarium. The Earl of Haddington is superior of the land on which the convent stood.

A tradition exists that the bell of the convent was carried by the English to Durham, and suspended in the cathedral of that city.

In the "Book of the Assumption of Benefices," preserved in the Advocates Library (31, 3, 13), the "Priorie of Cauldstreame" is valued thus: "In money, £201; wheat, 3 chalders, 10 bolls, 2 firlots, 2 pecks; bear, 21 chalders, 8 bolls; meale, 3 chalders, 10 bolls, 2 firlots," which is described as "payd out of the lands of Lanaile and Hirsell, Todrig, Skaitmure, Simprin, Whitchester, and out of Lanaile, Kirk of Hirsell, and Bassinden." The rent paid to the Crown out of the surplus of the thirds of the benefices in 1587, is named as £66, 13s. 4d.

The chartulary of the convent is preserved among the Harleian MSS. in the British Museum. Appended to the record is a docquet, certifying that, on 3d April 1434, in the third year of Pope Eugenius IV., and the 12th Indiction, John Laurence, licentiate in decretals and notary-public, was by Mariota, Prioress of Coldstream, and her convent assembled in chapter, requested to make a transcript of their charters and other muniments, which he accordingly did. The reasons assigned for the transcription are these: the age of the documents, and apprehension of English invasion, which rendered them liable to burning or other accidents. A transcript of the chartulary, entitled, "Diplomata Ecclesiæ S. Marie de Caldstream," is extant in Macfarlane's Collections in the Advocates Library.

The chartulary was long an object of attention to antiquaries, and the council of the Surtees Society nearly half a century ago recommended that it should be included in their series. This was not done; and it has been reserved to the Grampian Club now to bring the work before the public in an authentic form. In 1850 the charters, rendered into English, were privately printed by Mr William Watson, in an octavo volume, entitled, "Historic Memorials of Coldstream Abbey, collected by a Delves in Antiquity." This work, not very skilfully executed, has become extremely rare.

The seal of the convent is represented in the accompanying engraving; it is taken from an impression attached to one of several documents in possession of the dean and chapter of Durham.

An engraving appears in Laing's "Scottish Seals" (Supplement, plate xv., fig. 5); but it appears to have been copied from a somewhat worn impression, and this has led Mr Laing to describe as "a crescent" what is evidently the curled tail of a bee or scorpion. Laing's impression also differs from this seal in having the fish turned to the dexter, and in having three instead of five quatrefoils. The matrix of the seal is in the possession of Dr William Martine of Haddington. It is of lead, and has been reduced in size, by having the rim containing the legend cut off.

To Mr Joseph Bain, F.S.A.Scot., the Editor is indebted for the transcript from the Harleian MSS., which has been used in the present volume. Through diligent research in the Record Office and elsewhere, Mr Bain has otherwise rendered important aid. The Rev. Robert Paul, formerly of the Free Church, Coldstream, now of Dollar, has, by supplying local information and other useful materials, rendered valuable help. Mr Dunbar of Northfield has obligingly communicated an autotype of the founder's seal. Mr Thomas Dickson, of the General Register House, has facilitated the transcription of several original documents; and Mr Walter Macleod, professional searcher, has rendered that important service which might have been expected from his well-known skill, ardour, and intelligence.

ABSTRACT OF CHARTERS.

1. Patrick, Earl of Dunbar, for the safety of his soul and that of Cecilia his wife, grants to God, and the Church of the Blessed Mary of Caldestrem, and the nuns there serving God, all the land in the vill and territory of Laynal, which was formerly Sir Patrick Edger's, knight, with his men and their "sequele" and goods, which land the said Sir Patrick Edger, knight, resigned to the earl for defect of service, by staff and baton in full court. To be held by the said nuns as freely as any alms is held in the whole kingdom of Scotland.

2. Patrick, Earl of Dunbar, grants to God and the Church of St Mary of Caldestrem, all the land with toft and croft which Sir Alan the chaplain, the son of Gilebert of Halsington, held in the vill of Laynal, in free, pure, and perpetual alms, to be held as freely as any alms is held in the kingdom of Scotland.

3. Earl Patrick grants to God, and St Mary, and the nuns of Caldestrem, the land of Scaithemor, which Norman son of Norman, gave to Amabilis his wife, in dower; but which the earl grants to the nuns in perpetual alms, free of all service, for the souls of all his ancestors, as the charter of Richard, son of Norman, testifies.

4. Earl Patrick grants to God, and St Mary, and the holy nuns of Caldestrem, in perpetual alms, the land of Scaithemor, as Adam, son of Osbert, held it.

5. Richard, son of Norman of Leinhal, grants to God, and St Mary, and the nuns of Caldestrem, the land of Scaithemor, which his father Norman gave to Richard's mother, Amabilis, in dower, but which Richard gives to the nuns in perpetual alms for the soul of Earl Waldeve and Countess Alin, his spouse, and for the safety of the body of Earl Patrick, and for his soul, and that of Countess Ada, his spouse, and the souls of Richard's father and mother, and his own and his wife's souls, etc.

6. Amabilis, wife of Norman of Leynal, grants to God and the Church of St Mary of Caldestrem, her dower of the land of Scaithemor for ever, in pure alms, as the charter of her son Richard bears. The seals of Lord H., Abbot of Kelso, and her son Richard, along with her own, are appended.

7. Earl Patrick of Dunbar confirms to God and the holy nuns of Caldestrem, the whole church of Laynall with all its pertinents, to be held in perpetual alms, as the charters of his predecessors Earl Cospatric and Earl Waldeve, his father, attest.

8. Cospatric, the earl, to all his good men, "theins and drengs," clerks and laics. Grants to God and the sisters of "Witehow" there serving God, the half of the church of Laynall, with a half carucate of land, and one carucate of land, namely, half of the land of Laynall, and another half of the land of Birghame, in "perennial" alms; and "know ye [says the earl] that my spouse, Derder, has given them one carucate of land of the land of Hirsell, and the church of the said vill, which I grant and confirm; and know ye that I have given to them a half carucate of land of the land of Laynall with Addoc, my cousin; and know ye that Norman, son of Edulf, has given and granted to the said nuns one carucate and a half of the land of Laynall, with my consent, and that of Norman his heir; and therefore I confirm that, and ordain that the foresaid nuns shall freely, quietly, and honourably for ever hold these alms, as any benefaction is more freely or well held." Among the witnesses is "Walter, the earl's son." This may be an error for Waldeve, the next earl, as no Walter is known.

9. Patrick, Earl of Dunbar, for the safety of his soul, and that of Cecilia his spouse, and the souls of his ancestors and successors, has granted and confirmed to God, and the Church of the Blessed Mary of Caldstream, and the nuns there serving God, all his lands in the vill of Laynall, viz., "le Suthtun" of Laynall and pertinents, liberties, and easements, etc., in free, pure, and perpetual alms, etc., and appends his seal.

10. Randulfus de Haultun grants and confirms to God, and St Mary, and the holy nuns of Caldstream, these seven acres of land, which lie between their lands near Auttaslau, which were his before the "conversion" of his daughter Matilda, for the souls of his father and mother, and those of his ancestors and successors, and for his own soul and that of his spouse Sierith, in free, pure, and perpetual alms, etc.

11. "C[ospatric], the earl," to all his good men, "theins and drengs," clerks and laics, greeting, has given and granted to God and the sisters of Witehoh, in that place serving God, one carucate of land, viz., a half carucate of the land of Laynall, and another half of the land of Birgham; and Derder, the countess, his spouse, has given to the said sisters one carucate of the land of Herishille and the church of said vill with all pertinents; and Norman has given them one half carucate of the land of Laynall in perennial alms, all which the earl confirms for the safety of the donors' souls, free and quit of all services for ever, etc. Among the witnesses are Countess Derder, Waldef, son of the earl; Lambekin, the steward; and Ernulf de Suinton.

12. P[atrack], called Edger, the son of Walter, grants for himself and his heirs, to be firmly bound "fide media" to the master, prioress, and convent of Caldstream, to quitclaim and totally resign by staff and baton his whole right of his land of Laynall, with all its pertinents, without any retention, with all his "men," to his Lord Patrick, Earl of Dunbar, in order to infest the nuns of Caldstream, whensoever it shall please the master and nuns, although he strictly subjects himself and his heirs to the authority of the Lord Bishops of St Andrews and Glasgow, and their officials, archdeacons, and deans for the time being, any one or two of whom chosen by the master, prioress, and convent, may compel them at pleasure by "coher-sitation" to the said resignation and quitclaim to be made to the said earl whenever the said master, prioress, and convent will, as well within the "curia" of the said earl as without it, all cavil, exception, delay, and appeal being postponed, and renouncing therein all remedy and aid of law, canon or civil, and all privileges granted and to be granted to crusaders, and all else which may any ways be objected against the present writing, and which may avail the said Patrick and his heirs, or hinder the said master, prioress, and convent. In witness of which thing the granter appends his seal in "presence of many men worthy of credit." Dated at Caldstream, the Friday next after the Feast of St Denys (thus on the 13th October) 1273.

13. Mariota, Lady of Hume, formerly spouse of Sir Patrick Edeger, in her lawful widowhood, has granted and quitclaimed all her right within the vill of Laynall and without it, viz., of the "Northtun," with all its pertinents, to God, and the Blessed Mary of Caldestrem, and the nuns there serving God, as freely as any widow in the kingdom of Scotland in her viduity could grant or give, for a certain sum of money paid to her in her urgent necessity. Appends her seal before witnesses. One of these is Sir William, vicar of Assinden, master of Caldstream.

14. P[atrick], son of Lord P[atrick], Earl of Dunbar, has confirmed to God, and the Church of the Blessed Mary of Caldstream, and the nuns there serving God and the Blessed Mary, all that land which the said nuns hold in the vill and territory of Laynall, of the grant of the lord, his father, together with the houses of Berwick, which were David the tailor's, in the street of Rammsden upon the Nesse, which houses they hold of the grant of Lord P. the earl, his father, to be held by the said nuns as freely and quietly as the charters thereof by the fore-said Lord P. the earl, his father, to the foresaid nuns in themselves more fully bear. Appends his seal. Among the witnesses are "P. de Dunbar," the son, and Sirs John and Alexander, the brothers of the granter.

15. To all the sons of Holy Mother Church, William, the son of Patrick, greeting. At the bidding of charity has given and granted to God, and the Church of St Mary of Caldstream, and the nuns there serving God, the church of Herissille, with its lands, tithes, and offerings, and all other just pertinents of said church, in free, pure, and perpetual alms, as freely and quietly as the charters of Earl Cospatric, and Earl Waldeve, and Patrick, the granter's father, witness and confirm, and as any church in the kingdom of Scotland is more freely, quietly, honourably, and fully held.

16. Patrick, Earl of Dunbar, to all the faithful in Christ, greeting. At the prompting of piety, for the safety of his soul, and the souls of his ancestors and successors, has granted, given, and confirmed to God, and the Church of the Blessed Mary of Caldstream, and the nuns there serving God, one carucate of land in Haldhersehyll, with all its pertinents unreservedly, viz., that carucate which Walter, called the chaplain, the son of Walter the son of Thomas, the Knight of Derchestyr, held hereditarily of the granter, and which the said Walter, for defect of the service due therefrom to the earl, resigned for himself and his heirs in the earl's "plena curia" by staff and baton, and quitclaimed for ever. To be held by the nuns in free, pure, and perpetual alms. The earl and his heirs warrant the land against all men and women. He appends his seal before witnesses.

17. P[atrick], Earl of Dunbar, to all the sons and the faithful of Holy Mother Church, greeting. Has granted, at the prompting of charity, to God, and the Church of St Mary of Caldstream, and the nuns there serving God, the church of Herisehill, with lands, tithes, and offerings, and anything justly pertaining thereto, in free, pure, and perpetual alms, as freely, quietly, honourably, and fully as the charters of Earl Cospatric, and Earl Waldeve, and Patrick, his uncle, and William, his [uncle's] son, witness and confirm, etc. One of the witnesses is "Fergus, son of the Earl."

18. William, son of Patrick, to all the faithful of Christ, greeting. At the prompting of piety, and for his soul and the souls of his father and mother, and of all his ancestors and successors, he gives, grants, and confirms to God, and St Mary of Caldstream, and the nuns there serving God, the land which is called Rondes, and the meadow which is called Bradspotes, in his territory of Herisill, to be held of him and his heirs for ever, in pure and perpetual alms, etc.

19. Patrick, Earl of Dunbar, has given and confirmed to God, and St Mary of Caldstream, and the nuns there serving God, that land at Hersil which lies next Leet on the south part of the bridge as he had perambulated it to them, to be held in pure and perfect alms, etc. Appends his seal. Among the witnesses is "Patrick, son of the Earl of Athol."

20. Patrick the Knight, son of Lord Patrick, Earl of Dunbar, grants to God, and the Church of St Mary of Caldstream, and the holy nuns there serving God, all that land next Leet which is called Putanyshalwe, viz., from Leet on the east side entirely to the land of the said nuns. To be held, etc. Appends his seal.

21. Walter, son of Sir Thomas of Dorcester, with consent of his heirs, grants to the nuns of Caldstream twelve acres of land which lie nearer his land in Huysheugh in the south part, and twelve acres in "Veteri Hersill," viz., seven acres in one "cultura," and five acres in another "cultura" on the south part, for his soul and his father's soul, and the souls of his ancestors and successors, and for participation in the benefits which are or shall be in said abbey. To be held of the granter and his heirs in pure alms, etc.

22. To all the faithful of Christ, Walter, son of Walter of Dorcester, greeting. Has granted and confirmed to the nuns of Caldstream the donation of his father (the lands as in preceding abstract No. 21). Appends his seal before witnesses. One of these is Walter, the farmer of the Lord Earl in Hersill.

23. Thomas, son of Walter of Dorcestyr, confirms to the nuns of Caldstream all the lands, possessions, and liberties given and granted by his father and his predecessors in the territories of Ald Hersil and Scaymor, with all their pertinents, etc. Appends his seal before witnesses.

24. William, son of Patrick, gives and grants in pure and perpetual alms to the nuns of Caldstream all the land which they hold in his feu of Hersill, viz., the land called Thotheryg and Spechenes and Kaldstreflat, as freely as any perpetual alms is held in the kingdom of Scotland.

25. Alexander of Syntun has given, granted, and quit-claimed to the priocess and convent of Caldstream, all the land of Totheryg, with all the pertinents, liberties, and easements thereto pertaining, which land he had of the gift of Sir Aymer de Makyswell and his heirs. To be held as freely as the charter of feu made to the said nuns, or the charter of the king, more fully testifies. The granter and his heirs shall fully answer for all things which may be exacted by the said Sir Aymer's heirs from the said land. Appends his seal before witnesses.

26. Earl Waldeve to all his good men and friends, and all the beloved in Christ, greeting. After the gift by his father, Earl Cospatric, of the half of the church of Laynal to the nuns of Caldstream, which he had confirmed, he gives and confirms in augmentation the other half of said church after the death of the "instituted parson." Moreover, he gives and confirms to them Witechestre by its right bounds, and as much common in his pastures lying around as [is necessary for] their own work horses and one carucate of land in the "territory of Hersill" and common of the said town, with all its pertinents, which Countess Derder, his mother, gave them, and Earl Cospatric, his father, confirmed by his charter, and he confirms all the land which Norman, son of Edulf, gave them in Laynal by its right bounds, for the love of God and safety of his soul, and those of all his ancestors and successors, in free and perpetual alms, etc.

27. David, the marshal, declares that the controversy between himself and the nuns of Caldstream regarding the land lying between Witchestyr and Ottyrburn is thus settled—that he and his heirs have quit-claimed to the said nuns the foresaid land, from that place where Heselihow falls into "Dvi" towards the mountain as far as the source (ebullicio) of the rivulet of Heselihow, and thereafter crossing the moor to the head of the "petarium" towards the north, so that neither he nor his heirs shall claim any right beyond the said boundaries. Appends his seal before witnesses.

Among these are Nesius de Walton and Richard Namus or Le Neym, the latter of a family which held large territories on the Border, in Tweeddale and in Buchan (Orig. Par. Scot., vol. i.; v. Broughton).

28. Henry, son of Cunan, declares that a similar dispute between himself and the nuns regarding the said lands was settled in the same manner. Appends his seal before the same witnesses.

29. Patrick, son of Earl Patrick of Dunbar, grants to the nuns all the land of Selbuclethe, which Alan son of Thomas held, by the same right bounds by which Alan held it, by gift of the granter's father. And, in addition, the granter gives to the nuns all the grazing from the head of Wlveshope outside of the wood across as far as the valley descending between Farniley and Strikesley, descending upon the rivulet of Crumbesyde, and so ascending by that rivulet between Crumbesyde and Sengedewde up to the bounds between the lord earl, his father, and William de Vepunt. To be held by the nuns of his father and his heirs, in pure and perpetual alms, etc., as his father's charter purports.

30. A confirmation by the same of the preceding charter, somewhat fuller in its terms. The granter's seal is appended. One of the witnesses is "Hugh, the forester of Duns."

31. Richard, son of Hugh the cook of Dercester, grants to the nuns one toft in the town of Dercester, with a rood of land adjacent thereto for ever, rendering thence yearly to the granter or his heirs, for all service, custom, and secular demand, one pound of cumin or three halfpennies, at the fair of Rokesburgh. Appends his seal.

32. Alan, son of Thomas, son of Elene, grants to the nuns an acre and a half of land in the west part of his croft, with the toft joined to the said land, and three acres of land in the "cultura" called Spitelflat, in the territory of Dercestyr, with all their pertinents, etc., as well within as without the town of Dercestyr, in free alms for ever, etc. Appends his seal.

33. Alan, son of Thomas of Dercestyr, grants and confirms to Sir Walter the chaplain, son of Walter, son of Swardy, one acre of land in the town of Dercestyr, lying next the way which is called Cakewellegat, on the east part, with all pertinents, etc. To be held of the granter and his heirs for the yearly reddendo of one penny, or a pair of gloves at the Feast of St James the Apostle, in name of feu-farm, etc.

One of the witnesses is Sir John Gray, then the steward of Sir Patrick, the earl.

34. Walter, the chaplain, grants to God, and St Mary's Church of Caldstrem, and the holy nuns there, a toft and croft in the town of Dercestyr, on the east side of the way, called Cakewelle-gat, to make a "pitancia" to the said nuns on the morrow of St Lawrence the Martyr, for the soul of Matilda, the granter's mother, and of his ancestors and successors, in free alms, with the common grazing of the town of Dercestyr, and all other common easements, etc. He also gives to the nuns, with consent of Walter, son of Swardy, his father, one acre and a half of land lying upon Coteplatte, on the east side of the land . . . in pure and perfect alms. The granter appends his seal.

35. William, son of Patrick of Hersill, grants to God, and St Mary, and the convent of Caldstrem, the whole common grazing of Thornidicke, for forty mares and their followers, until the said following shall attain the age of three years, and for eighty "beasts of labour" (averia), and for eighty swine, and for two hundred ewes, so that the ewes, besides the foresaid grazing, shall enjoy the common easement and grazing of Gordon wherever they can reach it. But if the said "beasts" or swine shall by chance have strayed beyond the bounds of the said grazing of Thornidicke towards the grazing of Gordon, no fine shall be demanded therefor. But for the keeping of the foresaid swine, the said convent shall make no enclosure in its land. The granter has confirmed this gift for the safety of his soul, and of those of his ancestors and successors, to be held in pure alms as the charter of Thomas of Gordon attests. One of the witnesses is H., Archdeacon of Dunkeld.

36. Thomas of Gordon grants to the convent the said grazings in precisely similar terms.

37. Thomas of Gordon, son of Sir Thomas of Gordon, knight, grants to them the whole gift which his said father gave as in his charter, excepting the eighty swine, for which the granter gives to the said nuns in exchange common grazing in Thornidik and in Gordon¹ for one hundred ewes, together with the twø hundred ewes aforesaid, and for twenty "avers" with the other eighty "avers" before named in the common pasture of Thornidich in his father's charter, and in increase of his father's gift, and for his own, and his wife's, and his father's, and mother's, and all his ancestors' and successors' souls, the granter gives to the nuns that land which lies between the fosse of the passage out of the town, and the land formerly given by his father to them, in free alms, etc.

38. Thomas of Gordun, son of Thomas of Gordun, confirms to the nuns the preceding grants of his father and his overlord as to the three hundred ewes, one hundred avers, and forty mares, with their foals, with a clause that neither the lord of the land nor any other shall make any fence in the territory of Thornidich in which the said mares and foals, "avers," and ewes may not go without any harassing or contradiction. The said ewes also enjoying, beside the grazing of Thornidich, the common grazing of Thornidich, the common grazing of the granter's town of Gordun and easement everywhere, except growing corn and meadow. He also declares that no "inprecacio" or fine shall be levied if the said animals by chance overleap the bounds of Thornidich towards the grazing of Gordon, and gives the land between the fosse of the passage out of the town of Thornidich in the east part, and the land formerly given to them by his father. And if the nuns shall have men occupying, or shall have let the foresaid lands to farm, those who shall have or hold the same shall use the common easements of Thornidich as well in grazings, and in "focalia" as in freedom of the mill, viz., that the said men as well as the said nuns may grind their corn, which they have grown or have of the gift of the granter and his father, in the land of Thornidich, at his mill, entirely without multure, if it pleases them to grind there, so that it may be ground immediately after that which chances to be on the "trimodium" at all times for ever, unless it happens to be the granter's demesne corn; or they may lead their grain elsewhere wherever it pleases them better.

39. Thomas of Gordun repeats the grant of common grazing of Thornidich for forty mares and their following.

40. Thomas of Gordun grants to God, and the Church of St Mary of Caldstream, and the convent, one toft, which Reginald the mason held, and four acres of land adjoining, measured with the said toft in his land of Thornidich, to receive and shelter the "avers" which are specified in the other grant they hold from him, and, likewise, four acres of meadow, measured in the meadow called "Lene dimedii." To be held by the granter and his heirs in free alms. Richard, Abbot of Kelso, is one of the witnesses.

41. Thomas^{*} of Rawchburne grants to God, and the Church of St Mary of Caldstream, and the nuns, that meadow called Camminesmedu, lying in the territory of Thornidich, with the pertinents, to be held of the granter and his heirs in free alms.

42. Thomas of Rawchburn, son and heir of William of Rawchburn repeats the grant of same lands.

43. William of Mahle of Bastyndane grants to God and the Church of St Mary of Bastynden, fifteen acres of land, eleven of which lie in the field of Bakestaneden, and four acres at Harelaw, and all the meadow at Strotherflat, and one acre of meadow at Hunpul, and that toft and croft and two acres of land which Adam, the poor clerk, at one time held, and besides, two acres of land which lie at Heuedes, which said acres Robert of Mahle, the granter's "nepos," gave to God and the said Holy Mother Church of Bakestaneden, with all liberties and easements pertaining to said town, for the souls of the granter's father and mother, and all his ancestors and successors, in pure and perpetual alms.

44. Robert of Maille, with consent of his heirs, grants to God, and the Church of St Mary of Caldstream, and the holy nuns serving God there, seven (sic) acres of land in the field of Bastynden with the pertinents, viz., in these places, four acres between Fahelaue and the moor, and four acres at the head of the crofts, in pure and perpetual alms, for the souls of his father and mother, and ancestors and successors.

45. William of Mahile grants and confirms to the nuns that toft and croft in the town of Bastynden, which Orm, brother of Hutred the chaplain of said town, at one time held of the granter, and two acres of land, one at Kukeflat and the other next Harelaw above Watlandis, with their pertinents, in pure alms for the soul of Earl Waldeve and his countess, and the granter's father and mother, and all his ancestors and successors.

46. Robert of Mayl, "nepos" of Garin of Mayl, with consent of his heirs in time of peace, has given and granted to the house of Caldstream and the nuns there serving God, in pure alms for the safety of his own and his ancestors' and successors' souls, all his land of Bastynden, viz.: the land adjacent between the chapel and his house, and besides, the land called Faulauche and the meadow next that land, free from all custom and exaction saving his lord's right in terms of his charter. "Dominus R.," Abbot of Kelso, is a witness.

47. Roger, son of William of Bastynden, and Alicia, his (R.'s) wife, have quit-claimed all their right of service and suit of court, and all other demands from the prioress and convent of Caldstrem or their assigns, in the territory of Bastynden, and append their seals.

48. W., the boatman, burgess of Berwick, confirms to the nuns a certain annual rent of 20s., to be uplifted from a certain land in Uddinggate, in the town of Berwick, between the land of Symon Flint on one part, and the land of William the gold-worker, which he holds of the Abbot and convent of Kelso, on the other, at two terms, viz.: 10s. at Pentecost, and 10s. at the Feast of St Martin in winter. "Sir Mathew of Grenelau, maior of Berwick," is a witness.

49. Roger Nurys, burgess of Berwick, grants to the prioress and convent of Caldstrem, that land in Corsgate, within the town of Berwick, which he lawfully bought out of his own funds, as it extends in length and breadth between the land of Osbert Dute on one side, and the land of Margaret Bernham on the other, to be held for payment to his lord the king, of six pennies yearly in terms of the custom of the burgh.

50. Robert de Bernham, rector of the church of Tynningame, confirms to the house of Caldstrem and the nuns one merk of annual rent in pure alms, to be uplifted from Roger, son of Martin the weaver, and his heirs or assigns, annually, for a certain land which the said Roger holds of the granter in feu-farm, which lies within the town of Berwick in Crosagate, between the land of Arthur on one side, and the land of John Gray on the other, to be paid at two terms of the year, viz.: half at Easter, and the other half at the Feast of St Michael.

51. William de Salle grants and confirms to God, and St Mary of Caldstrem, and the nuns, all that land lying between the granter's stone house and the house of Jordan, his son-in-law, with all messuages and other pertinents, to be held of the granter and his heirs in pure alms, free of all claim and service saving the king's, viz., six pennies. Among the witnesses are "Bartholomew, Provost of Edinburgh, and William, his son."

52. John of Dunbar, burgess of Berwick, grants to the house of Caldstrem and the nuns, 20s. of silver, to be annually uplifted from a certain land in the street of the shoemakers for ever, viz., the land which he bought from Symon Cnute, which land lies between the land formerly of Thomas of Notingame on the north side, and the land of William the Englishman on the south. To be held of the granter and his heirs in pure alms. "Sir Robert of Bernham, Maior of Berwick," is a witness.

53. Thomas of Warndham, with consent of his heirs, has granted and confirmed to the holy nuns of St Mary of Caldstrem one acre of land with his "cultura" of the toft behind the hospital of Banburch, in pure and perpetual alms, for the souls of his father and mother, and all his ancestors and successors, in free burgage, etc.

54. Ysouda, daughter of Wido, the glassmaker of Alnewych, of her free choice, and being in secular habit, has given and confirmed to God, and the Blessed Mary of Caldstrem, and the convent of nuns and sisters serving God there, for the souls of Wido, her father, and Mariota, her mother, all her right in that part of the mill of Sepley, with the pertinents which John le Visconte of Stanford granted to her father Wido and herself, for the feu-farm of one penny annually, etc. Among the witnesses are Master Alan of Len, Archdeacon of Northumberland; Lord Walter, Abbot of Alnwick; Ebiorard the German.

55. John of Plesset, for the safety of his soul and that of the late Elene his wife, and all his ancestors and heirs, has given and granted to God, and the Blessed Mary, and the nuns of Caldstrem, in free, pure, and perfect alms, 40s. of annual rent of his mill of Plesset, to be uplifted there by their certain attorney from the granter and his heirs and assignees annually at two terms, viz.: 20s. at the Annunciation of the Blessed Mary, and 20s. at the Nativity of the Blessed Mary. But the granter has assigned said rent specially for the dress¹ of his daughter Johanna, who is a nun there, as long as she lives, and after her decease it may remain for the use of the said house for ever. And should it happen at any term that the payment of said rent is not fully made, then the granter and his heirs shall answer to the said nuns for all expenses incurred in recovering it, as these shall be established on the simple word of the master of the house or the prioress. Among the witnesses are the Lord Adam, Abbot of New Minster, and Sirs Walter and Stephen, rectors of the churches of Staunton and Morpeth.

56. Alexander, by the grace of God, King of Scots, to all good men of his land greeting. Confirms the grant which Patrick, Earl of Dunbar, made to God and the Church of the Blessed Mary of Caldstream, and the nuns, of all his land in the town of Llaynal, viz., the Southton of Laynal with the pertinents. [The place where the king granted this deed has been omitted by the notary.] Dated 21st June, in the twenty-first year of his reign (1269).

57. Patrick, Earl of Dunbar, grants and confirms to the nuns all the lands, possessions, and liberties given and granted or exchanged by his predecessors and himself, and other faithful Christians in the towns of Hersil and Laynall, and in the territories of the said towns; and also Witcester with all its pertinents; the lands, possessions, and liberties which they hold in the villis of Bastynden and Thornidich, and their territories, with their pertinents. Likewise, all other lands, possessions, and liberties which they hold of the gift of all or any persons who are in the granter's earldom or lordship. Any one unjustly injuring the nuns in their possessions shall be forced to make good the same by an assize of the kingdom without delay. The earl likewise, under his plenary forfeiture, prohibits all men under his rule from daring to molest the nuns or their tenants in the lands.

58. William of Haltun grants to the nuns five acres of land, which his brother Radulfus gave in free and quiet alms to the Church of St Mary and the nuns of Caldstream.

59. John Swinton of that ilk lets to the prioress and convent of Caldstream the land of Little Swynton for ten years. The rent is not stated, but is partly "temporal" and partly "spiritual." The term of entry is Whitsunday 1424.¹

60. William Drax, prior of Coldingham, lets the same lands (of which his house were the superior lords), and which were in ward, by the death of John of Swinton and the minority of his heir, to the prioress and convent of Caldstream, for all the time of their wardship, for the yearly rent of 40s., usual money of Scotland, at two terms in the year, Whitsunday and Martinmas. Dated 22d July 1426.

THE NOTARY'S DOCQUET.

On 3d April 1434, in the third year of Pope Eugenius IV., and the twelfth indiction, John Laurence, licentiate in decretals and notary-public, by apostolic authority, attests that a venerable and religious lady, Mariota, prioress of Caldstream, and her convent, duly assembled in chapter, produced to him all their charters, evidents, muniments, grants, and confirmations—and as partly on account of their age, partly on account of the fear of the English, especially those dwelling nearest, and on account of the various transfers of them hither and thither, and chiefly lest by accidents, as fire and chance of this kind, in their transfer, there was danger that the truth of the originals might perish—they demanded that the same should be faithfully copied in writing by him, the said official; which the said notary proceeded to do, all as certified by him before witnesses, etc.

ABSTRACT OF APPENDIX OF ORIGINAL DOCUMENTS.

I. Richard, Bishop of St Andrews, confirms to the Church of St Mary of Kaldestrem, the "place" with all its accessories and benefits, which Earl Cospatric and Countess Derdere, his wife, and Waldeve, their son and heir, granted in lands, waters, fishings, and pastures, and the churches of Lainhall and Heresille.

II. [This is in precisely the same terms and by the same person, William, son of Patrick, as No. 15 of the chartulary—but some of the witnesses are different.]

III. Alexander [III.], King of Scots, takes the holy nuns of Kaldestreme, their lands, men, and all their possessions, under his "firm peace," with all attendant privileges—that none shall take pledges of them or their men for debt to another, only for their own proper debt, etc. Roxburgh, 3d May, fourteenth year of his reign [1263].¹

IV. Henry of Hassekirke grants to the Church of St Mary of Kaldestrem, the land called Bellingdene, and the land called Todderig. Subjects himself and his heirs to the jurisdiction of the Archdeacon of Teviotdale, etc.

V. James [III.], King of Scots, confirms a previous charter of confirmation, dated at Perth, 23d July 1459, under the great seal of James II., of the grant of the lands of Simpryn to his beloved "oratrices," the prioress and convent of nuns of his monastery of Caldstreme, made to them by the deceased George

Schoriswode, Bishop of Brechin. The great seal is appended, and the confirmation executed at Edinburgh, on the 6th June 1472, twelfth year of the granter's reign. Several of the officers of state are witnesses.

VI. James [IV.], King of Scots, with the advice and consent of his council, grants inspeximus of a charter of sale made by John Liddale of Lanele to Margaret Hoppringil, present prioress, and the convent, of all and whole a plough-gate of land, with the pertinents lying in the town and territory of Lanele, within the county of March and sheriffdom of Berwick. [Here follows the deed itself in the usual terms.] The annual reddendo is one pair of hawking gloves or twelve pennies Scots, on the ground of the said plough-gate, to be delivered or paid by the lady prioress and convent to the king on the Feast of the Blessed Michael the Archangel in name of blench farm, if asked only. The deed is executed at Caldstreme, 24th June 1489, and the inspeximus at Edinburgh, on the 24th February following, before the chancellor and other great officers of state.

VII. James [V.], King of Scots, has inspected a certain charter of sale, made by Alexander Ellem of Butterdene to the prioress and convent of Cauldstreme, of all and whole his half of a husband-land in Hirsell, with pertinents, lying within the town and territory of Hirsell and sheriffdom of Berwick; by royal command, seen, read, inspected, and diligently examined, and in all respects entire. [Here follows the deed in the usual terms. The prioress's name is "Isobella."] The granter, Alexander Ellem, appends his seal and sign-manual, at Edinburgh, 17th of the month (?) 1535. One of the witnesses is Master John Lethame, sub-dean of the Collegiate Church of the Holy Trinity, beside Edinburgh. The King's Inspeximus is executed at Stirling, 20th July, twenty-second year of his reign (1535).

SUPPLEMENT TO PREFACE.

¹ During the War of Independence the priory was sacked and the nuns dispersed. In 1310, Beatrix de Hodesak, a former nun of Coldstream, having fled from the House, was residing in a nunnery near Doncaster. In 1315, Archbishop Greenfield, of York, addressed a letter to Thomas de Cresaker, stating that an investigation had been made as to Beatrix de Hodesak, and that she had become an anchoress in the House near the bridge of Doncaster, where she still was. She could not return to Coldstream, as the priory had been plundered and the sisters dispersed. Thomas de Cresaker is ordered by the archbishop to provide Beatrix with five quarters of grain during her stay at Doncaster (Raine's "Hist. Papers, etc.," in Rolls Series; see also, as to condition of the convent, "Registrum Palat. Dunelm.").

[Translation.]

These are the damages done to the house of Coldestrem by the noble prince the King of England and Scotland, on the Wednesday next after the Annunciation of the Virgin, the year of grace 1296, by loyal and faithful persons sworn and examined in the presence of Sir John, the king's treasurer, and brother Walter, his companion, and others of the king's council, viz., by ¹ Original in the Public Record Office. Printed in "Documents Illustrative of the History of Scotland," by the Rev. Joseph Stevenson, 1870, vol. ii., pp. 32-35.

Walter, master of the same house, brothers Adam, Alan, Alan, Robert, Alan, and Adam, brothers of the same house, who say, upon their verdict, that they sustained damage on the same day aforesaid, through the coming of the king, viz., 48 quarters of wheat, price of each quarter 5s.; and of rye 40 quarters, price of each quarter 4s.; and of barley and malt 56 quarters, price of each quarter 5s.; and of oats 80 quarters, price of each quarter 2s.

The amount of the corn, 50*l*.

Also, of ewes, four hundred and fourscore and seventeen, with as many lambs, price of each sheep with the lamb, 8*d*.; and 100 sheep, price of each sheep 8*d*.; of eleven score hogs, price of each 6*d*.; and of oxen and cows seven score and nine, price of each 3s.; and of young beasts 40, price of each 18*d*.; and of pigs 64, price of each 10*d*.; and of work horses 24, price of each 5s.

The amount of beasts, 62*l*. 15s.

Also, let it be remembered that the orchard of Caldestrem used to be worth yearly in common years 100s., not counting the consumption of the house; and since we cannot estimate the destruction of the said orchard, let it be left to the arrangement of the king's council.

By destruction of houses within the court and without, of carts, ploughs, and timber, 100s.

The sum total, 117*l*. 15s.; of which the house has received 15 quarters of wheat, and 15 quarters of beans, and 16 quarters of malt, by the hand of Peter the clerk; and by the hand of the treasurer £6 in money.

Price of each quarter of wheat, 10s.

Price of each quarter of beans, 7s. 8*d*.

Price of each quarter of malt, 7s.

Sir Hugh de Cressingham, Treasurer of Scotland, shall cause to be delivered to them 700 sheep, to arrive from the county of Athole, which Sir Robert Cambron, sheriff of the same county, has caused to be delivered to him, price of each 8*d*.; and 16 oxen, price of each 3*d*., of the 40 oxen which he caused also to come from the same county, and the other 24 oxen are delivered to the king's larder.

The amount of the money, and of the price of the wheat, beans, malt, oxen, and sheep above-mentioned, 50*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.* Which amount Sir Hugh is bound to restore and pay in the wardrobe.

And that sum deducted from the above-mentioned sum total, the sum which is due to them is 67*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*
